Presentation of 5 Laureates receiving the 2023 WWSF-Prize for women's creativity in rural life

1) MADJALIA SEYNOU, 38, from Burkina Faso (now living in the USA)

AN EXCEPTIONAL AND HIGHLY CREATIVE CONTRIBUTION TO ENDING RURAL POVERTY

The activities of FARM SAHEL, the organization created by MADJALIA SEYNOU, originally from Burkina Faso, focus on the end goals of improving food security and soil fertility, with an emphasis on community based, participatory methods. The activities address climate change and promote regenerative farming practices in Burkina-Faso. It aims at giving women farmers the tools that will enable them to both feed their families and sell produce to generate income, thus enabling them to send their children to school, hence increasing access to quality education, especially for girls. Madjalía has created 10 cooperatives, worked with 31 communities and supported well over 1000 women in improving their farming and increasing their harvests by over 50%. Her work constitutes a tremendous contribution to ending rural poverty and empowering the poorest of the poor.

Her contribution impacts the realization of various SDG targets.

2) ESTHER LUPAFYA, 65, Ekwendeni, MALAWI

A RELENTLESS CRUSADER FOR THE POOREST OF THE POOR

The achievements of Esther Lupafya are exceptional, and she has influenced in a very positive manner the lives of an estimated 20'000 poor farmers. She has helped them improve their farming techniques and hence boost soil productivity in an amazing manner, therefore greatly improving the production of food and the health of innumerable families. She has consistently supported greater gender equality in an extremely male dominated society.

A nurse by training, Esther was for many years head of the Maternal and Child Health unit at Ekwendeni hospital, a position that naturally enabled her to realize the importance of good nutrition on health, especially as many children were suffering from serious malnutrition. She is currently Executive Director of a non-profit she founded in 2017, the Soils, Food and Healthy Communities organization (SFHC). It is run by a board of local farmers experienced in agroecological farming methods. This NGO has helped hundreds of villages representing thousands of rural households improve their food security, nutrition, sustainable land management and gender equality. One especially exciting project of SFHC has been the establishment of a community seed bank so that families have access to a wide range of indigenous and local varieties of seeds to improve dietary diversity and nutrition. She helps families improve soil fertility via compost production and agroforestry.

Above all, Esther has been relentless in ensuring that her work remains focused on the most vulnerable households of Malawi. As a very large percentage of the poor rural women are illiterate, she found a highly original way of overcoming this obstacle by teaching the women health promoting songs. To summarize, Esther Lupafya is a truly exceptional individual who has demonstrated outstanding courage, creativity and perseverance in rural life while making a profound and lasting impact on her community.

Her contribution impacts the realization of various SDG targets.

3) MABEL IFEOMA ONWUKA, 50, NIGERIA

A PASSION FOR TEACHING NEW SKILLS TO RURAL WOMEN

An Associate professor specialized in soil chemistry, University of Agriculture, UMUDIKE, Abia State, Ifeoma's passion for adding value to humanity made her volunteer to enhance the lives of rural women farmers and girls by training them in using waste organic materials, compost and biochar (a soil condition) to improve soil nutrients and crop yields. She managed to translate complex research results into simple practical terms that made meaning to mostly women farmers.

She of course spoke in the local Igbo language. She came up with a low-cost pyrolysis unit which she trained rural women to fabricate and use, not just for their farm but also for sale, to increase the very modest income of their families. To date, Mrs. Onwuka has never received any reward in recognition of her pioneering work. She not only trains the farmers but evaluates the results of their progress in adopting novel technologies. Mrs. Onwuka is very passionate about empowering and building the capacity of rural women and girls. Apart from the technical training on improving their agricultural techniques, she has also helped build their capacity in leadership skills, their rights as women & other important social issues.

Her contribution impacts the realization of various SDG targets.

4) ANNE BOUCARD, 54, FRANCE

ENABLING THE GENERAL PUBLIC TO GET ACQUAINTED WITH AND BETTER UNDERSTAND THE ACTIVITY OF FARMERS.

Anne Boucard has many times been acknowledged as an exceptional farmer, in great part because she managed to harness internet to promote the cause of farmers. At a time when the immense challenges of the rural sector are little known and “agribashing” a favorite practice in some circles,

Anne Boucard has shown that a modern farmer is not a claustrophobic individual enclosed between his stables and his barns with a few fields forming the extent of his vision of the world, but can be a very active personality in their community.

Anne for instance played a key role in her community in the fight against cancer. She met her husband, François Boucard, a farmer in Bournois in the Doubs region of France. She impelled her husband to introduce improvements in the field of animal well-being with the introduction of automatic milking machines or soft technologies in the area of animal prophylaxis, introducing for instance essential oils or the practice of energy treatments (e.g., Reiki).

She has had major responsibilities in the field of agriculture, and because of her numerous commitments in this field she was nominated a Knight of Agricultural Merit in 2018. Her ethics can be summarized in two words: generosity, solidarity. She has really enabled the spirit of solidarity to prosper in the field of agriculture.

Health reasons have forced her very recently to interrupt her activity as a farmer, but her legacy in the field of social communication will survive for a long time.

Her contribution impacts the realization of various SDG targets.

5) MARIA EVA SOTO, 59, ARGENTINA

A TIRELESS FIGHTER FOR THE INDIGENOUS RIGHTS OF HER NATIVE PEOPLE, THE AVA GUARANI, THEIR LANDS, THEIR CULTURE AND LANGUAGE

Born in a family of nine siblings, she had to fight to go to school (her parents fearing that schooling would make her loose her cultural identity), ending up with a degree in Guarani culture and linguistic revitalization. After the reform of the National Constitution 1994, the pre-existing indigenous organizations resumed their activities. Maria Eva was active in getting the women together. However, the continuous violation of indigenous rights and the non-compliance of the laws protecting them decided Maria Eva to get involved in the struggle for their lands, which they had never been able to recover since ... the Conquest centuries before!

With the support of ENDEPA, an institution accompanying the Guarani people, Maria became a leader in the recovering of the stolen lands. The state finally made the commitment to return 11'000 hectares.

Other fights in recovering land rights continued, and many other struggles were to follow, including the struggle for intercultural bilingual education which she undertook for many years with the collaboration of the young people.

Maria is also an active environmental defender, protector of the bush (KAA) and water. She participated in denouncing deforestation and the illegal logging of native forests and river pollution, a process in which she fearlessly confronted large companies. For her people the forests are not only sacred but also the source of precious medicinal plants. She is also active in encouraging the harvesting of rainwater and the installation of cisterns.

She collaborates actively with numerous women's groups. Maria Eva is also considered a spiritual leader in her community. Her key values are love, respect and solidarity, the fundamental values of the Guarani people. Her greatest achievements might well be in the transmission of this knowledge and the Guarani language. Her main dream is that, together with her Guarani sisters, they will be able to stand on their own two feet and gain access to decent living conditions with the education of their young people.

Her contribution impacts the realization of various SDG targets.

About Women's World Summit Foundation (WWSF)

Mission & objectives of annual campaigns briefly described below and on our website: www.woman.ch

The Women's World Summit Foundation (WWSF) is a not-for-profit, international, humanitarian, lay, and non-governmental organization with UN consultative status (ECOSOC, UNFAP and DPI). Since 1991, WWSF serves with its annual campaigns, action kits, prize awards & Round Tables for the advancement of women and children's rights, and advocates for a world where 75% of the world population has a seat at the Table.

Via its international network and annual Calls for action, WWSF contributes to the empowerment, capacity building, and education for better prevention measures to eliminate violence against women, children, and youth, and ending rural poverty, and moving civil society actors into greater partnerships with governments to increase activism and ensure that the UN Sustainable Development Agenda 2030 is realized.

WWSF activities are coordinated by a secretariat based in International Geneva that deals with program development, management, fundraising, communications and relationships with members, donors, NGOs, staff, the media, and the United Nations. The secretariat also manages relations with Board Directors, Advisory members, Prizewinners, and active campaign coalition member organizations and networks, as well as with Swiss White Ribbon Campaign actors, who pledge the elimination of violence against women and youth by 2030.

WWSF convenes 4 annual campaigns, 2 prize awards, and 2 World Days, described briefly below.

1) 75% Campaign-Actors for the common Good (launched in 2021) Leadership Training for Women & Youth

75% Women, children & youth represent 75% of the world population, and claim a seat at the Table
 Les femmes, enfants & jeunes représentent 75% de la population et revendiquent le droit à la parole
 Las mujeres, niños & jóvenes representan el 75% de la población y reclaman un puesto en la mesa
 Frauen, Kinder & Jugendliche machen 75% der Bevölkerung aus & haben Anspruch auf einen Platz am Verhandlungstisch
8 March

We are expecting from world leaders to change course so that our children and grandchildren will not inherit the unstable and fragile world we live in. Women who give birth to all humanity deserve a seat at the Table to organize for a more equitable world community by including 75% in co-designing, together with men, the space in which we can live without fear and pain. WWSF invites "Actors 4 the common Good" to share their work, inspire the world and create an unstoppable movement for the inclusion of women & Youth leadership at all decision-making Tables.
